

Dear Mandy,

I read your letter and your story really touched. You seem confused, but I'm here to help you and give you some advices. First, you have to tell him the truth because you can't do this to your friend. If you want to keep a good relationship with him, you must stop lying to him. If he is a real friend he has to understand that it can't work. Second, if he persists annoying you, make him understand what you really want. If you are tired of his attitude, find some real friends. You can also visit the web site teljeunes.com. If he becomes violent, call the police, even if he is your friend. A real friend doesn't do that because it's dangerous. I hope I helped you.

Miss Loves!

