

One More Gram, Please?

Oh boy, I have one big problem. I have a friend who his parents divorce not so long ago. He always had problems at school but now it is getting worst and worst.

His parents never quite care about what he was doing and the people he hang out with. So he met some friends who had also problems. One day, one of his friends brought drug in the group. This friend said to the rest of the group that the drug makes every day of life easier. So my friend did like the rest of the group, but he got further then them. He is always on high. His grades just kept getting lower and I do not think he will ever graduate from high school if he continues in this path. His parents won't do anything to help him, because they are too busy yelling at each other to know who will have the responsibility of him.

I tried to talk with him to show him that the drug will KILL him, but he answered me "you do not know what I need to go through and you do not understand what is like to be in my shoes." If it continues like this, my best friend is going to hate me.

Could you help me help him please?

